

The brightly painted carved wooden doors of the Warner Chamber on the second floor of the Capitol are full of Native American images. At the center is a thunderbird, in front of an image of cornstalks. The woman carrying her baby stands atop a turtle, and the man holding a peace pipe stands atop an otter.